

Priorities of the Erasmus+ Programme at the UHK

University of Hradec
Králové

At the UHK, we support personal, educational, and professional development in education and training of students and staff.

Co-funded by the European Union

Inclusion and Diversity

Erasmus+ promotes equal opportunities and access, inclusion, diversity, and fairness across all areas, focusing on organisations and participants with fewer opportunities.

Participation in Democratic Life

This priority supports participants of the programme to become actively engaged with their communities and political and social life. It also strengthens citizens' understanding of the European Union – which is crucial for the Union's future.

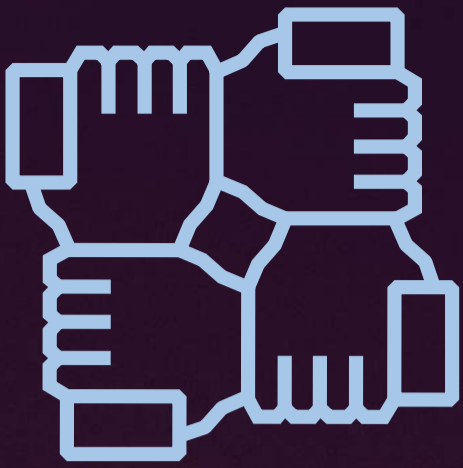

Digital Transformation

The COVID-19 crisis highlighted the importance of digital education, the need for digital transformation, the significance of harnessing digital technologies for teaching and learning, and the demand for developing digital skills for all.

Environment and Fight Against Climate Change

The European Green Deal is the European new growth strategy. It recognises the key role of schools, training institutions and universities to engage with students, parents, and the wider community on the changes we need for Europe to become 'climate neutral' by 2050.

Promoting inclusion & diversity

UHK supports promoting equal opportunities and access, inclusion, diversity, and equity as a part of its activities. The university's actions at various levels target participants with limited opportunities. Care for these students at the UHK is provided university-wide by the UHK point which provides counselling services, especially in the framework of the Augustin programme for supporting students with specific needs and the Open UHK programme. The university:

- communicates intensively with partner institutions on inclusion and equal access,
- is registered on the inclusivemobility.eu platform and presents its support offers for international students there,
- provides wheelchair-accessible facilities in the university's buildings. The UHK point regularly monitors the condition of the buildings and the needs of its visitors,
- seeks specific measures to facilitate the arrival and stay at the UHK for students with limited opportunities,
- also offers virtual and combined types of mobility to ensure inclusion in mobilities.

Supporting digital transformation

The university supports the use of digital technologies for teaching, education, science and research. UHK actively contributes to the development of digital skills and digital literacy of students and staff in the following ways:

- uses advanced online communication, which is applied at all stages of contact with students – from registration of prospective students to graduates,
- supports the equipping of its buildings and departments to use digital technologies and provides hybrid learning,
- offers students opportunities to enhance their digital competencies through courses, training or workshops,
- offers the possibility to participate in virtual or combined mobilities.

Promoting environmental sustainability

There is the Working Group on Social Responsibility and Sustainable Development at the UHK that promotes environmental sustainability and ecological practices. The university:

- informs foreign students in various ways about ecological and environmentally sustainable practices at the UHK (e.g. educational materials in the form of leaflets, videos, UHK website, parts of the UHK Guide, training courses, etc.,
- informs all departing staff and students about the principles of sustainable travelling and encourages the use of modes of transport that are consistent with these principles,
- engages domestic and international students and staff in environmental sustainability activities and practices,
- promotes the sharing of good practices with foreign partners in sustainability and environmental practices, including student competitions, joint workshops etc.,
- includes activities to promote sustainability in the field of mobilities in university initiatives and events.

PRIORITIES OF THE ERASMUS+ PROGRAMME

Promoting participation in democratic life

UHK embraces the values of freedom, responsibility, moral integrity, openness, diversity and cooperation. It seeks to convey the values of democratic life, social and civic engagement to incoming students as much as possible. In the field of promoting these values the UHK:

- organises activities that promote the European values, principles of democracy, freedom, and equality and offer participation in these activities to all incoming international students and staff,
- offers the opportunity to attend lectures, seminars, workshops and discussion clubs on European values, culture and democracy to all visiting international students and staff.
