

The Erasmus Exchange Program was a great learning experience from the first moment.

Before my arrival, the Czech Republic was an unknown country to me to some degree. I knew that it was famous for the beer, castles, hockey and the liveliness of Prague, and these were the elements that filled my imagination.

The few but good references I had were sufficient to make me embrace the opportunity to come here to live, to study and to meet and know more about this society.

A very favorable point from the outset was the safety. The country ranks among the top 10 safest in the world and being a woman, this was an advantageous criterion in the decision to come here.

And in fact, I could confirm that it is safe. I could freely circulate in the country and at a cheap price with the ISIC card, enjoying an accessible and efficient public transportation.

At the social level, the country faces the same challenges faced by other societies of the present moment: to create policies that can manage and solve social inequality, in an increasingly multicultural environment, by promoting respect and tolerance.

I am very grateful for the possibility of participating in Erasmus and for all the experiences I lived. For everything I have learned, for the lectures I attended, the events I participated in, the curious looks and smile of strangers on the street, the friendships I made, the trips, the random conversations... I am grateful even for the not so good times... all part of the process.

For all this, I consider my Erasmus experience valid and enriching. The 10 months I lived in Czech Republic will now be memories that I will have as reference and certainty that traveling is one of the best gifts of life.

Home is where we are.
